LOSS OF THE DRITISH BARK "HOPEWELL." A Marine Court of Inquiry was hold vestorday morning at the Harbour Master's Office to in vestigate the circumstances attending the loss of the British barque Hopewell, official number glois, number of whose certificate of competency 29,300, was lately master and commander. The Court was composed of Mr. C. V. Creage Acting Police Magistrate (President); Mr. G. Thomsett, B.N., Harbour Master; Mr. N. Ede profficial Justice of the Peace; Captain

Robert McMurdo, Government Marine Sur-Captain Langlois said-I took command of the Horewell on the 24th May, 1877. On the 24th October, 1879, I left Hongkong for Cobu, arriving there on the 9th November. On the morning of the 12th December we were at anchor. in the harbour. At six o'clock a.m., the wind was W.N.W. with rainy weather. We had on board 45 tons of sugar and 1,800 bales of hamp. At eight o'clook we had a lighter alongside with weather there my barometer was about 29.65. before with two-nuchors at thirty fathous. I mined so hard that we put the hatches on. We as her anchor caught our port chain and the ged astern of us and broke a boat. was then between the lighter and us. I then quickly out of sight. The schooner's bowspri and jibboom was corrying everything away above our rail until the bowsprit snapped off, 'carrying away her foremost and main topmast. The stump of the howsprit then played around our stern and started our planking. At last the achooner aligned her chains, but before doing that she let go a third anchor with a hawser. By this time it was about 10.30 o'clock. It was mpossible for me to pay out any more chain as o'clock I looked at the glass and found it will join the Force unless pressed by 9.00. Whilst I was below the windless paws snapped, and I just got on dook in time to see the bare ands of the chairs ranning out selves say it is extremely difficult to get reof the hawse holes. The deck stoppers had also given way. All the iron work on the wind therefore, that under present conditions the lass broke away. The ship was now adding with her head S. to S.E., the wind veering round to N.E. I held a consultation with the officers about the possibility of getting a spar anchor ever, and we came to the conclusion that it was impossible, as no one could stand ou deck in safety, with such a force of wind. I then ordered the carpenter and officers to stand by struck, which we had expected her to do every moment, upon the rocks or reofs. I also gave directions for the crew to keep to windward as tula Club. There was a good attendance and the their decision :- "The Committee heg to urge much as possible in case of cutting away. The Harbour. It is said she was beating into Naga- atmosphere was so thick that we could not saki when the wind freshened and she was driven see the length of the ship, and we ultimately represented and struck on a shoal nine miles S.S.W. of Cobn, sometime in the afternoon, " Half au hour previous to this she bumped heavily for some time, and then got off, drifting on shore, The cabin was then half full of water. I managed Manila took my official log. The vessel, after striking, laid on shore quietly. After we struck the weather moderated a little and the atmosphere cleared up. The next day, the 13th December, I walked to Cobn for assistance, but could not get any boats until Monday as the Custom House William Lockyer Dunn, chief officer of the Hopewell, said-I shipped on the Hopewell October, 1878, in London, 1 recollect the 12th December last. The ship was at anchor in Cobn harbour with two auchors, thirty fathom of cable on each. The captain gave orders to pay out mixty fathom of chain on each anchor, to furl the awnings, and call the men up out of the hold and aquare hatches. At nine o'clock we cleaved hawse. The jards were all braced to the wind. The highest yards we had up were the topgallant yards. By the time the orders had been completed a Spanish schooner drifted down on our port beam three or four ship's length off. believe the schooner's starboard ancher caught our port chain, for she fonled us amidship, and stove in our gig. We could not pay out any more chain as the schooner was on our quarter. She ultimately drifted astern, her bowsprit carrying our gear away aft until the bowsprit corried away, when the stump of the bowsprit bumped against our storn. The schooner then slipped berchain and shewent adrift. At that time it was very thick and very heavy weather on, and it was impossible to stand on dack. About halfpast pleven o'clock our windless paws carried eway and the cables ran out, the lashing and deck stoppers also giving way. The cables were clemphed in October last. We had a spare anchor on board, but the gale came on so quickly that we had not sufficient time to get it ready. The Hopewell ultimately grounded about ten miles from Cobn. There was water in the hold before Captain Langlois-I have since ascertained that where we struck was 11 miles N.E. of a village called Naga.

Captain Thomsett-How old is the ship, esp-Captain Langlois-She was built in 1868. Evidence continued-The crew counteted of who met his death from the blow of a stone upon sixteen hands all told. LEGALISATION OF THE JAPANES. YEN IN HONGKONG. The following is a translation of a Chinese petition just presented to the local Government praying that the Japanese silver you may be made legally current in this colony :-"We the undersigned Chinese bankers, morchants, and traders, resident in Hongkong, having lived in this colony for years and knowing the circumstances, and also being largely interested in its commercial development, humbly beg to potition His Excellency the Governor.

that His Excellency will he pleased to use his influence to make the Japanese silver. yen legally current in Hongkong. "It is now established beyond doubt that the Japanese silver yan is a coin of at least equal parity and weight with the Mexican dellar. "It is coined at a Mint which ranks amongst the first in the world, and under the auspices of a responsible Government, whose interests are bound up in the maintenance of its purity and "The Osaka Mint is within five days journey from Hongkoug, and there is direct and regular steam communication between the two places; and it is, moreover, the only establishment of its kind available for the Far Fast "The logalisation of the Japanese silver yen in Hongkong would give great facilities, in various ways, for the conduct of business transactions between this Colony and Japan, which are now rapidly on the increase. It would also be of the greatest service in Hongkong itself, and if the silver you be allowed to be legalised, commercial transactions will increase day by day. " For the above reasons, we respectfully lieg t urgo that the granting of this petition, while i certainly would injure no interests whatever, would, on the other hand, contribute in a most important degree to the commercial interests and convenience of Hongkong, and the development of its trade." The petition, we are told, bears the chops of over two hundred Chinese hongs.

CONFESSION AMONG PRIMITIVE RACES.

Confession was common, not only in Mexico and Peru, but among widely remote savage tribes, being closely counected with the belief in the power of sin to cause, and of priestcraft to cure, dangerous sickness. The Carrier Indians of North America thought that the only change of recovery from sickness. lay in a disclosure before a priest of every secret crime committed in life, and that concoalment of a single fact would meet with the punishment of instantaneous death. The Saincan Islanders, believing that all disease was due to the wrath of some deity, would inquire of the village priest the cause of sickness, who would sometimes in such cases command the family to assemble and confess. At this confessional ceremony each invoked in anger on the family or the invalid himself, long-concealed crimes being thus disclosed. In Yucatan, confession, introduced by Cukulcan, the mythical author of their culture, was much resorted to as death and disease were thought to be direct punishments for sin committed. - Toronto Globe.

And then a peculiar calamity occurred to baffle the investigations of early pedigree-makers in this country. there are a number of products in the shape. Our rough and ready monarch Edward I., in order to establish his claim to the Kingdom of Scotland, seized the public archives, ransacked churches, and pillaged monasteries in order to obtain and destroy the historical monuments which went to prove the Scottish side of the argument. He made a bonfire of there ancient chronicles, and in the flames disappeared the wherewithal of many an heraldic fable. This must have been a great blow to the early Burkes and Debretts on the other side of the Tweed, as the Scotch are naturally inclined to ride quite as high a horse as the Irish in the matter of lineage and pedigree. The claim, however, of the Scotch to have anything like so old a pedigree of their own as the face of the Erse, seems impossible to maintain in the face of the fact if fact it is -that they are at best but a rounger branch of the Irish stock. No Scotchman, we bebut returned with the news that, although rugged hills or slopes, it leads a life of un- lieve, of however ancient pedigree, has the temerity to go back as far as the Picts, whom, indeed, Konneth II. is said to have demothem, but that they had killed a good many utrised with, perturps, as much successons in the listed for good and all some time as the of the village cattle and manied a man, and Alps and Pyronece, or on the soil of the more beginning of the 9th century; and as for the that one of them, from the footprints, must rocky coasts of Normandy and Brittany. The Scots who trampled them out then, there seems to be no doubt in the world that thay were nothing more nor less than an Irish colony. We find the Venerable Bede talkwhen, more for a day's outing than anything danger whatever of being run over on the ing of the "Irish Scote;" and James I, of else, I determined to ride out the 12 miles line. If it be asked what profit would accrue England and VI. of Scotland-avery Scotchy person indeed, it may be remarked at the time of his accession to the English crown boasted to his Parliament that he derived his pedigree from the ancient kings of Ireland. There is one historical fact which could hardly fail to have had a considerable influ> ence in rooting ancestral pride very deeply indeed among the early Irish. We know that the enjoyment of the principal posts and ionours of the State was confined to some half-a-dozen septs or clans. Just as in the old days of Whiggism, Russells, Cavendishes, and Elliotts monopolised the big places in a Whig Administration, so in the early days of the Irish Pentarchy a few select families of "Macs" and "O's" took to themselves all the lordship and princedoms, the commands and governorships of the island. To belong to one of these favoured families was, of course, everything, and a correct pedigree was obviously an all-important possession. We may arrive at some idea of the attention that must have been paid to purity of blood when we are told that from the landing of the Milesian children to the landing of King | 8 Henry II., a period of just 2,140 years, no one but a lineal descendant of one of the three sons of Milesius sat on an Irish throne: And this, if true, appears more curious still when we remember that the Irish princedoms were at all times elective. This extreme attention to purity of blood naturally begot a taste for heraldry, and a > rigid system of precedence seems to have sprung up among the early Irish which a S modern Ulster King-at-Artis might have I envied, and which is very likely a good deal to blame for a great deal of nonsonse that is talked about the " ould stock " to this day. According to Keating, in order to preserve chiefs who assembled on solemn occasions at the hill of Teamor, or Tarah, Prince Ollam- G Marshal or Principal Chamberlain to hang up their fargets on the wall over the places intended for them; so that upon entering the apartments each chief took his seat under his respective target without the slightest c disturbance. This, it must be admitted, was pretty well for n.c. 950; and a lesson so early Ge taught sank deep into the minds of the Irigh Ha people. Bishop Berkeley said a kitchen wench in his employment refused to carry Ra out cinders because she was descended from an old Irish stock, and there is many an Irish cottier on the estate of un Irigh earl who, proud of his native ancestry, positively looks down on his landlord, who may only have come over " with Cromwell or William .-
